ONE in a THOUSAND; or, the Days of Henri Quatre.

By the Author of "The Gipsy," &c. &c.
"His most successful production. Full of mystery and incident, and never flags till we arrive at the dénouement. The period is exceedingly well chosen; the name of Henri Quatre conjures up a host of romantic associations; and the chivalrous monarch himself is introduced with great effect. Indeed, we have short and graphic sketches of most of the celebrated personages of the League. Madame de Montpensier, shrewd, intriguing, but fascinating, has the effect of a finely finished miniature. But the heroine, Beatrice of Ferrara, is the most powerfully conceived character."—Literary Gazette.

"It has all the taking points of an annual. Its plates, in excellence, may vie with the best. The tale are two in number. The latter is the pleasantest piece of reading this year has produced; as capital a bit of comedy as has been written in our century. The subjects and characters are fewer than in 'Peter Simple'; but, as far as they go, the scenes are animated by a similar spirit; there is the same humour, the same keen perception of character, an equal power of truly and quietly presenting it, as much of point and dry satire, and the same finish down to the minutest parts."—Spectator.

"There is nothing of the season, for embellishment and general attraction, superior to this Naval Annual. Stanfield has contributed his genius to a score of sea-pieces of extraordinary interest or beauty; and Captain Marryat has supplied a letter-press in his most characteristic style."—Literary Gazette.
